Sir John Crossley, during a political canvass in Halifax publicly referred to the fact that his mother was a servant girl on small wages. The story, as told, is that this girl was receiving six pounds a year, ing speculators. Under such circumstances it is perfectly natural that a reaction should set in, as it has done already, because any positive evidence of gold would have served to keep up the fever indefinitely.

The Chevenne papers sing small about the Black Hills business. No longer do we hear that Cheyenne is the nearest and best point to outfit for the hills, and that its enterprising merchants can furnish anything needed by explorers or miners.
